As we enter the final weeks of Term 2, and therefore Semester 1, I remind both parent and students of the following important information.

End of Semester Reports and the College Attendance Policy
Staff are currently finalising end of semester reports for all students.

Parents and students have been informed of our college’s updated Attendance Policy, where 90% attendance is required for successful completion of Units/Subjects.

Many students are currently below this required percentage. Where parents have approved an absence, this does not affect the overall attendance percentage.

Parents received notification at the end of Term 1, via Interim Reports, if attendance was a concern for their son/daughter and phone calls have continued to occur to alert parents on daily absences where no contact has been made with the college.

Parents should be aware that where a student’s unapproved absences means attendance is below 90%, a student might receive an overall “N” (non-satisfactory) completion for that Unit/Subject.

If parents are concerned regarding attendance levels, please contact Tania at the General Office or your son/daughters Learning Community Manager.

Learning Community Managers
Junior Mr. Roger Gooding
Middle Ms. Natalie Kirby
Senior Mr. Nick Pethica

College Text Messaging System
We look forward to introducing our new text messaging system (SMSing) to alert parents of student absences and other important information.

This new system should be in place at the beginning of Semester 2.

PLEASE NOTE: Parents should have received a letter from the college recently asking you to double check your contact details to ensure we have correct information for the SMS system to work effectively. If you did not receive a letter, please contact the office immediately (it’s likely your details may currently be incorrect).

2013 Course Selection INFORMATION NIGHTS

Students who will be in the Senior Learning Community and the Middle Learning Community in 2013 are advised they must attend the relevant upcoming information evening as follows.

Wednesday 18th JULY @ 6.00pm

Current Year 10 and 11 students.

Detailed information will be presented about pathway options including VCE, VET and VCAL, and the NEW process for course counselling and UNIT selection.

Monday 23rd JULY

Current Year 9 Students and Parents @ 5.45pm

Current Year 8 Students and Parents @ 6.45pm

On this evening students and parents will hear about Unit choices within the Middle Years Learning Community and how to go about selecting their courses.

For those students who will be entering Year 10 in 2013, choices for VCE & VET options will also be explained.

At both of these information evenings staff from each of the Key Learning Areas will be in attendance to discuss your child’s options, requirements and educational needs for their future pathway planning.

Support for Student Learning

Thanks to some very generous assistance from the DEECD Grampians Region, our college is now offering a variety of learning support programs for all students.

MathsOnline and Mathletics are two Internet based resources that all students in Year 7 to 10 are now registered to use. These learning resources are accessible at any time to assist students in their overall development within mathematics. Also thanks to support from the Grampians Region, the College is now delivering the intense numeracy support program known as QuickSmart, and we are delighted by the results and progress we are seeing in a number of our students.

Finally, we also look forward to the introduction of a new literacy support program known as “MULTILIT” (Making Up Lost Time In Literacy), which we will begin to deliver early in Semester 2. This program is a one to one support package and it has been demonstrated that students can progress their literacy skills at a rapid pace.

The College will make contact with parents of students who we feel may benefit from this program early in Term 3.

Year 7 1:1 Ultra Mobile PC Program

Thank you to the many parents who attended our information evening on Tuesday night for the launch of our new, Year 7 1:1 Ultra Mobile PC Program. We are very excited that all our Year 7 students now have the opportunity to access their own Ultra Mobile Laptop for 24/7 use. Our Year 7 students are also very excited to have their own personal machines. Any parent who was unable to attend this meeting should contact the General Office for information on how to enter the program.

Middle Learning Community - Publishing

The Middle School English elective Publishing has been busy polishing up their folios and thinking about showcasing their work. This week we have a great part one of a story by Year 9’s Marley Wright called, ‘The Blacksmith’. Marley has also published his story on the website Wattpad. Wattpad is a popular site where many teenagers post their writing and they can receive feedback from worldwide readers. Some members of the class have really enjoyed being part of the Wattpad community.

The Publishing class hopes to submit further work in the school newsletter so watch this space.

Marley Wright 9.1 - The Blacksmith

Clang! Clang! The hammer smashes the red hot metal. After a few more hits, the smithy grabbed his tongs and flipped the shovelhead into a bucket of briny water next to his anvil. It hissed, releasing billowing clouds of steam into the air. Garth smiled. Getting something finished always raised his spirits. He pulled it out of the warm water and looked at it. The blade was, thick, but with a sharp end. It would last many a year. He looked around his forge. The furnace dominated most of the area. A massive beast puffing smoke, it sat to one side. In the middle stood his faithful anvil (it was his father’s, and his father’s before that). Apart from his tool rack sitting near the anvil, the only things worth mentioning were the walls.

Garth was a proud but humble man, but people said he talked himself down. They said that everyone one has to have some physical possessions to be proud of. So he started putting things on his walls. Tools that were special, skillfully crafted weapons, paintings even an apple he was once given from the king’s apple tree. Besides, he lived alone, so it added some sentiment to his otherwise tough life.

He was happy with his setup, and lived that way for many years. In fact, it was 20 years to the day since he started ‘smithing’ and that anything major had happened.

It was a chilly winter morning. Garth was grateful for the warmth his furnace provided. As he rubbed his hands, a chill hit his back. He turned to see a tall robed man standing there. His face was pale and gaunt. His hair was dark and limp. And his eyes black as night. The eyes stared at Garth for a few moments, and then he spoke.

“Smithy, I have need of a special sword.” He handed him a scroll. “This contains the details. And the king’s word must be obeyed.” Garth opened the scroll and stared at the paper. He lingered on a few words then said, “How will I tell you when it’s done?” The man appeared to think. “I’ll know,” he said menacingly. And with that, he left.

Garth sat down. He reread the scroll. What the man had asked was near impossible. A sword, of average size, which would not rust, dent or tarnish. This was difficult enough, but it was also specified that the sword be light. Most metals were heavy, and the ones that were light were too weak. And it had to have a flawless emerald set it the hilt. Gems were hard to come by, and all gems had to be given to the king. He sat back and ran his fingers through his hair. It was a foolish venture, to be sure. Any other smith would have dismissed the idea with a laugh.
But it was the king’s orders, or so he said. Even so,
he had could not help but imagine what such a sword would look like. It would be a powerful weapon, and it would look both refined, deadly (and, in fact) bloody magnificent. The thought burnt into his mind until he gave in. He would try, at least to find a metal to meet the specifications. That, at least, would be within his power. And so the very next day, Garth shut up his home, packed some food and set off down the road. He wasn’t just heading off without a plan though. He had heard of a mining town in the Western hills whose tools were surprisingly tough. For many centuries, people had begged for the secret of their metal but they would not say anything. Even Garth could tell that the metal was so good due to special ores. It might be just what he was looking for.

A few days later he arrived. After securing lodging at the local inn, he began asking around. Most people shrugged him off and a couple even growled at him.
Exhausted, he sat down in one of the inn’s dark dusty corners. He ordered a drink and wallowed in his misery while he thought of what to do next. A rustling sound came suddenly from his left. Startled, he jumped. A small wizened old man shuffled out of the shadows and up to his table. “So, I hear you’re looking for some ore?” he croaked in a raspy tone.
Garth fixed him with a steely look. “Why, no more than 10 coppers? Have we got a deal?”

The man pulled a wry grin. “Well, maybe I want to tell you where to find some? I was hardly about to ask you the state of your dog now was I?” he gave another laugh. Garth softened. “Assuming you do know where to find some, what would I have to do to earn that information?” The man pulled a wry grin.
“Why, no more than 10 coppers? Have we got a
deal?”

Garth scowled. He kicked a rock, stubbing his toe.
He scowled again, with some expletives mixed in.
Garth fixed him with a steely look. “Maybe, but what’s it to you?” he replied scornfully. The man said. “What the fffffuguava is that?” He kicked a rock at a wall. A small crack appeared.

What had all this been about? Was it oblivion, Garth thought. The sword and into the ground
